

I'm here to help you. Yes, the world is a mess. Yes, it can be hard to want to go on. But I need you to do something. Stop looking at the storm around you, the things you fear. And stop looking at yourself, and hating yourself for the things you've done and the things done to you. Just look at me.

I love you, more than you can ever imagine.

If you will trust me, I will help you.
I'm afraid.

Keep your eyes on me. You are safe with me. I will wrap you up in my arms and carry you.

Your sins don't have to have power over you. Let go of them and let me deal with your enemies.

What if I'm not good enough?

You'll never be good enough to earn Heaven. Your salvation was paid for by me.

But it's your choice.

You can come, follow me, and we'll walk together through life. I'll choose the path. It will be difficult, but you'll never be alone. And one day, when your days here are completed, I'll take you into Eternity in Heaven.

Or, you can refuse to come into the shelter of the Father. He wants to cover you, protect you, but you don't have to come. He loses so much sleep over the ones who chose their own way. I wish you could hear Him weep. I wish you could know His love, and love Him back. It's all He ever wanted.

What about Hell? He'll send me there if I don't choose Him.

People send themselves there. Hell was created for Satan and His demons, not for people. Satan has tried to claim you, to make you believe that Hell is your destiny. But it's not. God is calling you away from all that. You just have to listen to God and reject the condemnation that Satan wants to give you.

Declare your faith in me. Let the Spirit make you new. It's cool; trust me.
